In total, we have reviewed 157 application. Most of the applicants were from Baku (83), two of them presented their application from abroad, and the rest were from the different regions of Azerbaijan.

The SGSP Mentorship Program

In 2019, SGSP launched the Mentorship Program. The goal of the program is to provide our young girls with mentors and to provide structured mentoring program capable of assisting mentees in their academic life and ideas, defining career goals and plans, and supporting relevant education/skills development needs.

Mentorship program provides new development opportunities for our scholarship winners. Along with career and educational development, girls can get real-life advice from experienced mentors. Communicating with professionals from different backgrounds and expertise improves mentees' communication skills and provides larger and a more valuable network for them.

When looking for a mentor we are looking for the people who enjoy giving back and having an impact on others' lives. This year we confirmed six mentors selected among nine submitted applications. Most of our mentors enjoy the experience and are open to learn from their mentees as well. This is an opportunity for them to have access to the next rising talents and take part in their progress.

RIPL (Rondine International Peace Lab)

founded in 2017, is the alumni network of over 200 professionals from different parts of the world who have successfully completed an international fellowship program at the Rondine Cittadella della Pace Association. RIPL has as its main power in the growing international network of professionals who have undergone a personal and professional transformation and have the potential of becoming leaders who are eager to change the world. In its values, RIPL, highly promotes women's participation not only in the peace processes, but also in the community life by educating and giving them necessary instruments. RIPL considers gender equality as an indispensable requirement for the development of the society.

This year, thanks to the collaboration with RIPL, our scholarship program does not only provide financial support to the awardees, but also entails training program aimed at raising awareness about gender equality, domestic violence, and women's empowerment.

Violence against women and girls is a complex social problem. It is a consequence of gender inequalities deeply rooted in the patriarchal norms and unbalanced power relations and it is a mechanism through which gender inequalities are established and maintained. Exposure to various forms of harm and life in fear prevents women to fully realize their own potentials, reducing their wellbeing, but also reducing their contribution to the development of the society. Therefore, prevention and elimination of all forms of violence against women and girls, is, from the perspective of both humanistic and development approaches, the responsibility of the whole society.

SELECTION PROCESS

The selection process of the scholarship recipients took place in three stages: 1) Initial review; 2) External review; 3) Interview. Each stage of the selection process is described below.

Initial review

During this stage, the SGSP project team reviewed the 157 applications by assigning them into three categories: highest need, moderate need, lowest need. The criteria used for determining the level of need was based on an applicant's social and economic indicators as demonstrated in the application. After the initial review of all applications, the SGSP project team identified 63 applicants who advanced to the second stage.

External review

Four of the SGSP supporters and a member of our partner organization (RIPL) indicated commitment to help with the selection of the scholarship recipients. At this stage, the supporters were asked to read through applicants' short answer essays and identify applicants who demonstrate a) the highest need and b) a sense of purpose. As a result of the external review, the SGSP project team determined 35 finalists who made it through to the final stage.

Interview

At this stage, the SGSP project team scheduled a phone or a Skype interview with each finalist to get to know them better and ask questions that were not on the application form. As SGSP is a needs-based scholarship, the project team aimed to probe finalists further on how the scholarship fund is relevant to their needs. Upon careful deliberation, 6 scholarship recipients were selected at the end of a four-day interview process.

That same year I got admitted to the Azerbaijan State Economic University to pursue bachelor's degree in information technologies (IT). I want to take my place in the field of IT through self-improvement and by becoming a specialist in this area. Despite the obstacles on my way to reach these goals, SGSP has expressed a great deal of support and I will continue my journey with the help of the program...

How does SGSP help you in reaching your educational goals? As a senior majoring in geography education, I have been seriously contemplating about my future. Although I have tried to do my best to become a well-educated professional, being brought up by a single parent along with a sister and a brother has posed financial challenges for reaching certain goals. I plan to get master's education abroad and I have been working towards this goal tirelessly. After completing my education abroad, I see it as my moral duty to come back to Azerbaijan and pay it forward to others. Even though I have never met Shahla Garayeva, her life and her story have inspired me to follow in her footsteps. With the help of SGSP, I will be able to continue my education without any obstacles and move towards my future career goals more confidently.

Zhala Isizade

How does SGSP help you in reaching your educational goals? Due to the financial situation of my family, I have faced obstacles in continuing my education in the field of oil mechanics. I believe that an educated woman is one of the foundations of an educated society. Considering this, I hope to get a master's degree after I successfully graduate from my undergraduate program. The fact that my major is so multifaceted provides me with a wide range of options. I plan to continue my education in the field of oil-chemistry engineering. To achieve this, I have to work hard non-stop with great persistence. Winning a place in SGSP has been a tremendous motivation. From now on my biggest dream is to prove that I deserve this value. In future, I want to be able to help girls in need like myself and to throw out a lifeline to young girls.
